

“Aqua Cadens” by Christopher Brown

What happens when water tumbles over a rock or down a steep slope? Aqua Cadens examines just that. This collection focuses on water under the influence of gravity and photographic light, utilizing long exposure to create a curtain of silky water like the paint brush of the classical photographer. Photographed using Medium Format Film, and captured by the silver bromide in the emulsion, Aqua Cadens have been printed on warm-tone Silver Gelatin paper.

After a career as a successful Aircraft Engineer for the Royal Air Force, then a Field Support Representative and Engineering Manager for the Boeing Company, Christopher Brown walked away from the corporate life to follow his passion for Photography. During his two-year stay in Afghanistan, he discovered there was more to life than money and being bound to a 9 to 5 corporate career.

Christopher brings a passion to his photography, and videography; a heart and soul that developed from his corporate and military background. He captures the beauty, the spirit and the essence of the moment so others can experience the enthusiasm he sees the world has to offer.
